

ABOUT RIM

A modern Dharma center with clear roots.

Rooted in Mindfulness is a nonprofit community in Brookfield, Wisconsin, offering meditation, Buddhist teachings, and spiritual friendship in person and online.

Our aim is not to create better spiritual consumers. It is to help one another cultivate the causes of well-being and transform the causes of suffering.

OUR PURPOSE

Practice that benefits more than one person.

We practice to care for our own hearts and minds, to meet the people in our lives with greater wisdom and compassion, and to participate more responsibly in the world we share.

RIM welcomes newcomers, experienced practitioners, secular and spiritual seekers, and people whose relationship to Buddhism is still unfolding.

01

Direct experience

Teachings are invitations to investigate life, not doctrines you are required to accept.

02

Ethical roots

Mindfulness belongs with compassion, wise speech, non-harming, and responsibility.

03

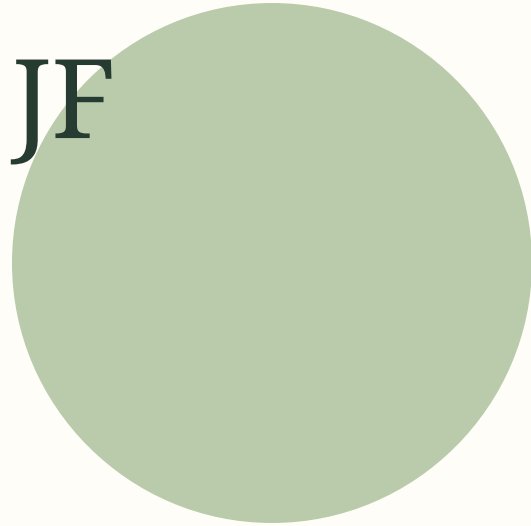

Generosity

Regular teachings are offered without tuition so money does not determine belonging.

04

Community

Awakening is not only personal. We create the conditions for one another to practice and grow.

GUIDING TEACHER

Jesse Foy

Jesse is the founder and guiding teacher of Rooted in Mindfulness. His teaching is informed by more than twenty-five years of learning and practice, interdisciplinary education in Buddhism and contemplative psychology at Naropa University, advanced Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction training, clinical mind-body work, and retreat practice with Western and Eastern teachers.

Community members often describe his particular gift as bringing newcomers into the conversation without reducing the depth or significance of the teachings.

“There are those who teach, those who do, and only one I have found who does both.”

COMMUNITY MEMBER

AN ORGANIZATION SHAPED BY THE PRACTICE

The center should embody what it teaches.

RIM is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit supported by community generosity, volunteers, teachers, and a board. Transparency, care, and shared responsibility are part of the practice—not administrative details separate from it.
