

SUPPORT RIM

Generosity is one way practice moves outward.

RIM is sustained by people offering what they genuinely can: presence, attention, practical help, teaching, care, and financial support.

DANA

Teachings offered freely, community sustained freely.

Dana is a Pāli word for generosity. In the Buddhist tradition, teachings are offered without a price, and the community responds according to its means and appreciation.

A donation is never a fee for spiritual access. It helps sustain the center, teachers, technology, scholarships, and the conditions that let another person walk through the door.

OFFER YOUR PRESENCE

Specific ways to help.

Service is most supportive when expectations are concrete and honest.

Welcome team

Greet people before gatherings and help newcomers understand the space.

Space care

Help with cushions, tea, plants, light cleaning, or preparing the room.

OCCASIONAL OR RECURRING

Community communications

Support the newsletter, calendar, or program information.

REMOTE-FRIENDLY

Greater community service

Help organize opportunities for the sangha to support local organizations.
